At FSU we value, celebrate, and leverage our differences and similarities. We inspire an environment of innovation and passion—one that enables us to create a teaching, research, and service environment that better reflects the needs of our students, faculty, staff, and community.

The seed of collaboration is often conversation. In what has become a signature semi-semesterly event, we convene members of our campus to explore a simple, yet powerful idea: people who rarely cross paths can start building bridges by breaking bread together.
The Center for Leadership & Social Change

We believe the recognition of our individual and collective identities—including ability, age, ethnicity, faith structure, gender expression, nationality, race, sex, sexual orientation, veteran, and socioeconomic status—and their intersections, leads to the understanding that diversity enhances our quality of life. We believe service is an effective way to learn about yourself and others. “The journey to success, despite how easy it may look, requires hard work, perseverance, and grit. The key to balancing success between the classroom and other activities is understanding that to be present and do your work, you must first take care of your physical and mental well-being. It’s important to know what fills your cup so you have enough to pour into other cups. The keys to sustainable success as a leader are prioritizing your own wellness and having a firm grasp on your purpose. These priorities have allowed me to balance my goals while creating a healthy environment of accountability. I also have a strong support system of people who remind me that when the going gets tough, they’re there to help me push through.”

FOCUSED on ACADEMICS

COMBINED DEGREE PROGRAMS

Combined bachelor’s/master’s pathways provide academically talented undergraduate students an opportunity to complete both a bachelor’s and a master’s degree. Upon approval, a combined bachelor’s/master’s pathway allows for up to 12 graduate hours to be shared with, or double-counted toward, an undergraduate degree program. A student enrolled in a combined pathway will earn the baccalaureate degree upon completion of the undergraduate program and master’s degree upon completion of the graduate program.

Qualified students interested in pursuing a combined bachelor’s/master’s pathway should contact the respective department/unit associated with the pathway for more information regarding specific admissions criteria and program requirements. FSU students normally apply to participate in a combined bachelor’s/master’s pathway in their junior or senior year as an undergraduate, but may apply as early as the second semester of their sophomore year. See gradschool.fsu.edu/academics-research/combined-bachelorsmasters-pathways for more information.

Because some of these master’s degrees can be completed within one year, More in Four participants can leave FSU in four years with not only a bachelor’s degree, but also a master’s degree. The Seminole Tribe of Florida are a courageous, tenacious and determined people who, against great odds, have struggled successfully to preserve their culture and to live their lives according to their traditions and beliefs. As history shows, they are a people who have resolutely refused to accept defeat, whether at the hands of the U.S. military or when faced with the unforgiving wilderness of the Florida Everglades.

Florida State University proudly identifies itself with this heroic tribe. The name “Florida State Seminoles” was selected by vote of the University’s student body in 1947, shortly after FSU became a coeducational institution and re-established a football team. The name was selected specifically to honor the indomitable bravery, strength, and spirit of the Seminole Tribe of Florida.

For more than seven decades, FSU has worked closely with the Seminole Tribe of Florida to ensure the dignity and propriety of the various Seminole symbols used by the university. The University’s goal is to be a model community that treats all cultures with dignity while celebrating diversity.
